"RED HOT RAILS"

Release No. 1844

A Life Cartoon Comedy

Mike, the hero who is a switch tower worker, is shown riding down the railroad tracks with his sweetheart, Myrtle, the flapper heroine. He returns to work while she passes through the yards and stops to console the cattle penned in the stock cars. Once inside the cattlecar, the demon villain, High-hat Harold, closes the door and locks her inside. He starts the car rumbling down the grade, and then ropes and ties Mike to his chair in the switch tower.

As Myrtle rushes to her destruction, Mike finally frees himself by burning off the ropes binding him. As the stock car rushes on down the hill towards the oncoming Limited, the hero starts after the runaway car on a hand car. By using an airplane and undaunted courage he manages to rescue his sweetheart and prevent the impending crash. Bandits attempt to aid the villain in his plot but they are foiled.

Remarkable views of the onrushing train are shown as it plunges into the river and misses the stock car by the narrowest margin. Myrtle's rescue by the daring Michael forms the highlight of the action.
